Pennsylvania Medical Marijuana Legalization & the Utilization of Telemedicine

It would be an understatement to say we as a society are technology driven. So too are our expectations about medical care, and thus the increase of telemedicine in healthcare. This has been particularly true during the Covid-19 pandemic.

But how about medical marijuana? Can an eligible patient obtain or renew a med card through the use of a telehealth appointment? The answer is yes. Moreover, many medical practitioners who provide such services are embracing telehealth appointments. Pennsylvania does not have any specific regulations pertaining to the practice of telehealth/telemedicine limiting the ability of a doctor to prescribe via electronic means.

In fact, Governor Tom Wolf has encouraged the use of telemedicine in response to the COVID-19 outbreak, allowing practitioners to provide services through electronic means to Pennsylvanians during the crisis.

As to medical marijuana, the main point of any restriction or limitation on medical practitioners providing advice on the medical use of cannabis is to:
1. Make sure that a doctor maintains independent medical judgment when prescribing, and;

If a doctor has a financial interest in a dispensary and directs a patient to a dispensary, that would create a conflict. On the other hand, as long as the doctor adheres to the two guidelines shown above, utilizing telemedicine in prescribing a med card is not a problem. The potential convenience to the patient is clear, and this is one reason why this method of obtaining a med card is popular. We’ve written in the past on the potential benefits of medical cannabis for the personal injury and accident victim as a means in managing pain. Of course, there are many treatment alternatives available to patients. Medical cannabis can be one solution to pain relief. It is, of course, a personal decision as well as a medical decision.

We’re deciding to answer a couple of questions we’ve gotten from clients this month and give you answers to common questions about uninsured motorist coverage in car accident policies. This is the kind of information that insurance companies don’t freely hand out.

Many states do not require drivers to carry sufficient amounts of liability insurance coverage. For instance, in Pennsylvania the minimum amount of liability coverage that is required is $15,000.

You can protect yourself, though, by reviewing your own automobile insurance policy for uninsured (UM) and underinsured motorist (UIM) coverage. UM coverage protects you and your family in the event the at fault driver did not carry enough insurance coverage, or let their coverage lapse. Therefore, if you purchased UM coverage on your car insurance policy, your insurance company steps into the shoes of the at fault driver and you can make a claim for compensation for your injuries and damages up to the limits of the amount of coverage that you purchased in UM benefits.

Having UM coverage is one very important way that you can protect yourself and your family in a car accident case. It can assure you that the medical bills and future expenses caused by injuries from an uninsured driver can be paid. Consider the fact that by some estimates close to 50% of the driving population in or around Philadelphia is uninsured. That means if you or your family members are involved in a car accident, you stand a very high chance of being injured by someone who is uninsured.

How about underinsured motorist coverage?

UM coverage protects you and your family in the event the at fault driver did not carry enough insurance coverage. Let’s say the at fault driver had a $15,000/$30,000 liability policy. And, let’s say you and your family members all had injuries that exceeded $30,000 in value. Under that scenario, you would be able to collect $30,000 in coverage from the at fault driver’s insurance policy ($15,000 maximum per person) and then you would be able to make a claim against your own insurance company for UIM benefits up to the amount that you purchased in UIM benefits. UM and UIM coverage is not mandatory in Pennsylvania. That means when you are sold an insurance policy in Pennsylvania unless you ask for this coverage, you won’t be able to get it.

Shower Door Explosion Case

Carpey Law was contacted by a potential client in Alberta, Canada who was injured when she was in her shower and the shower door exploded. The shower door manufacturer is located in Pennsylvania. Therefore, we can file suit in Pennsylvania. These cases are not that uncommon. If the shower door is defective during the manufacturing process, and if not installed properly, it can spontaneously explode. Our client sustained serious injuries, and Carpey Law is pursuing this case.

Zantac (Ranitidine) Recall

This medication was originally manufactured by Pfizer to treat and prevent heartburn and stomach ulcers. On April 1, 2020 the FDA announced that it was removing all Zantac and generic versions as well as over the counter Ranitidine products from the market due to injuries from these medications resulting in: bladder cancer, breast cancer, colorectal cancer, esophageal cancer, renal cancer, lung cancer, pancreatic cancer, prostate cancer, stomach cancer, and liver cancer. Carpey Law is investigating several of these cases.
